SECTION ONE

Brand Overview

STRATEGY — OVERVIEW

THE BRAND TONE + RATIONALE

The brand identity creates a polished, modern, joyful, and friendly feel Breakaway is well known for.

The brand identity offers ideal clients a glimpse into what to expect when working with Breakaway and interacting with the brand and team. The clean, modern shapes found in the logo elevates the design are balanced by the minimal, hand-drawn style of the icon design. The color palette brings together trustworthy shades of deep blue and vibrant accent colors that lend a sense of joy, warmth, and friendliness. Together, they create an identity that is equally professional as it is personable.

An at-a-glance visual brand reference guide to help you keep things cohesive.

Frame it in your office, carry in your notebook so it's ready at all times, or laminate it if you're into that kind of thing :)

HAPPY BRANDING!

SECTION TWO

Logo Usage

LOGOS — GUIDELINES

The do's and don't of using your logos.

PLEASE DO

- ✓ Use the logos provided in your various brand colors.
- ✓ Use the 'primary' logo as priority, and 'secondary' or 'sub-mark' logos as alternatives.
- ✓ Provide plenty of space around the logo. Make it big or small, just don't make it cluttered. (See page 10 for spacing guide.)
- ✓ Maintain strong contrast between the logo and background.

PLEASE DON'T

- ✓ Get silly and do something weird with the logo (please, and thank you!).
- ✓ Rotate, stretch, crop, skew or alter the logo.
- ✓ Obstruct or add to the logo.
- ✓ Apply effects (such as drop shadow) to the logo.
- ✓ Adjust the colors of the logo.

Provided in the following single color options:

PRIMARY LOGO

TEXT ONLY LOGO

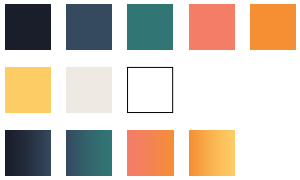
BREAKAWAY

Brand sub-marks show attention to detail and allow for flexibility throughout design.

USAGE EXAMPLES

- ✓ Website favicon
- ✓ Social media profile image
- ✓ Branded stickers or stamp
- ✓ Detailing on printed or digital materials
- ✓ To create texture

Provided in the following solid colors and gradients:



SOLID FILL

GRADIENT FILL

Ample breathing room is everything when it comes to your brand.

Your primary logo, secondary logo or brand marks should have a clear space margin equal to, at a minimum, a quarter of the x-height of the logo or mark being used. No other visual elements (type, photos, your favorite cat gif) should enter this space.

This padding around the mark ensures that the logo is highly legible and will read correctly.

Be aware of legibility through sizing as well – if items within the logo becomes unreadable, do not size that small and opt for an alternate logo layout or brand mark usage instead.

Let's talk some logistics, because I'm nerdy and here to help.

Using the proper file types and color modes are just as important as being consistent through typography, spacing and color palettes.

FILE TYPES

.EPS

Scalable vector with transparent backgrounds. Best for printed items, like business cards or client guides/magazines.

.PNG

Raster file with transparent background. Great for web when transparency is needed.

.JPG

Raster file without transparency. Great for web (typically for photos).

COLOR MODES

FOR PRINT

For printing, it is best to use the CMYK color breakdowns.

You can find the CMYK color codes in the next section of this style guide.

FOR WEB

For web use, it is recommended the HEX (#) or RGB color values.

It is important to note that each color might appear differently on various computers/devices, due to inconsistent monitor color calibration.

SECTION THREE

Brand Essentials

TYPE — COLOR — GRADIENTS

USING TYPE

Intentional typeface selections and usage will help ensure the success of your brand.

Rubik is the primary brand typeface and Karma is the secondary typeface. Rubik has a simple, clean style that meshes well with the typography of your logo. It's balanced by Karma, which has classic lines of a serif font but with a friendly feel. Open Sans is the body copy, which was chosen for it's versatility and easy legibility for your website.

All of these fonts are readily available on Google Fonts and Canva.

TIP: Using a variety of weights (light to bold), italics, and sizes helps to easily create hierarchy and visual interest in designs without appearing cluttered.

RUBIK

This is an example of headline type. Use it sparingly, but don't be afraid to go big and bold.

KARMA

H2 & H3 for supporting text in subheads.

RUBIK

H4 FOR SHORT SUBHEADS.

OPEN SANS

This is an example of body copy used in a paragraph. Venenatis a condimentum vitae sapien. Placerat duis ultricies lacus sed turpis. Ultrices eros in cursus turpis massa tincidunt dui.

USING COLOR

Correct color usage will anchor brand consistency across all platforms.

Midnight, Navy, and Teal are the deeper, muted toned that anchor the brand and help bring a sense of polish, professionalism, and trust. Coral, Orange, and Yellow are your accent colors, which communicate joy, friendliness, and service. The two neutrals round out the palette and provide a versatile option that works well as a backdrop for all the brand colors.

See page 10, color modes section for more information on usage.

USING GRADIENTS

Gradients add life to the brand while still maintaining consistency to the visual core of the brand logos, colors, etc.

Gradients can make their debut through branded collateral such as PDFs, custom tissue paper, etc. They're great for adding visual interest to design pieces, backgrounds, and more.

WEB STYLES — ICONS

Web element styles

Type, color + web styles to consider when updating your site with your fresh new brand identity.

These examples are provided to show you how to apply your branding to your website design.

Not sure what a favicon is?

It's the little icon that shows up in the corner of a web page's tab in a browser. This is a fun detail that's easy to add to your website design and serves to bring more cohesion to every aspect of your brand!

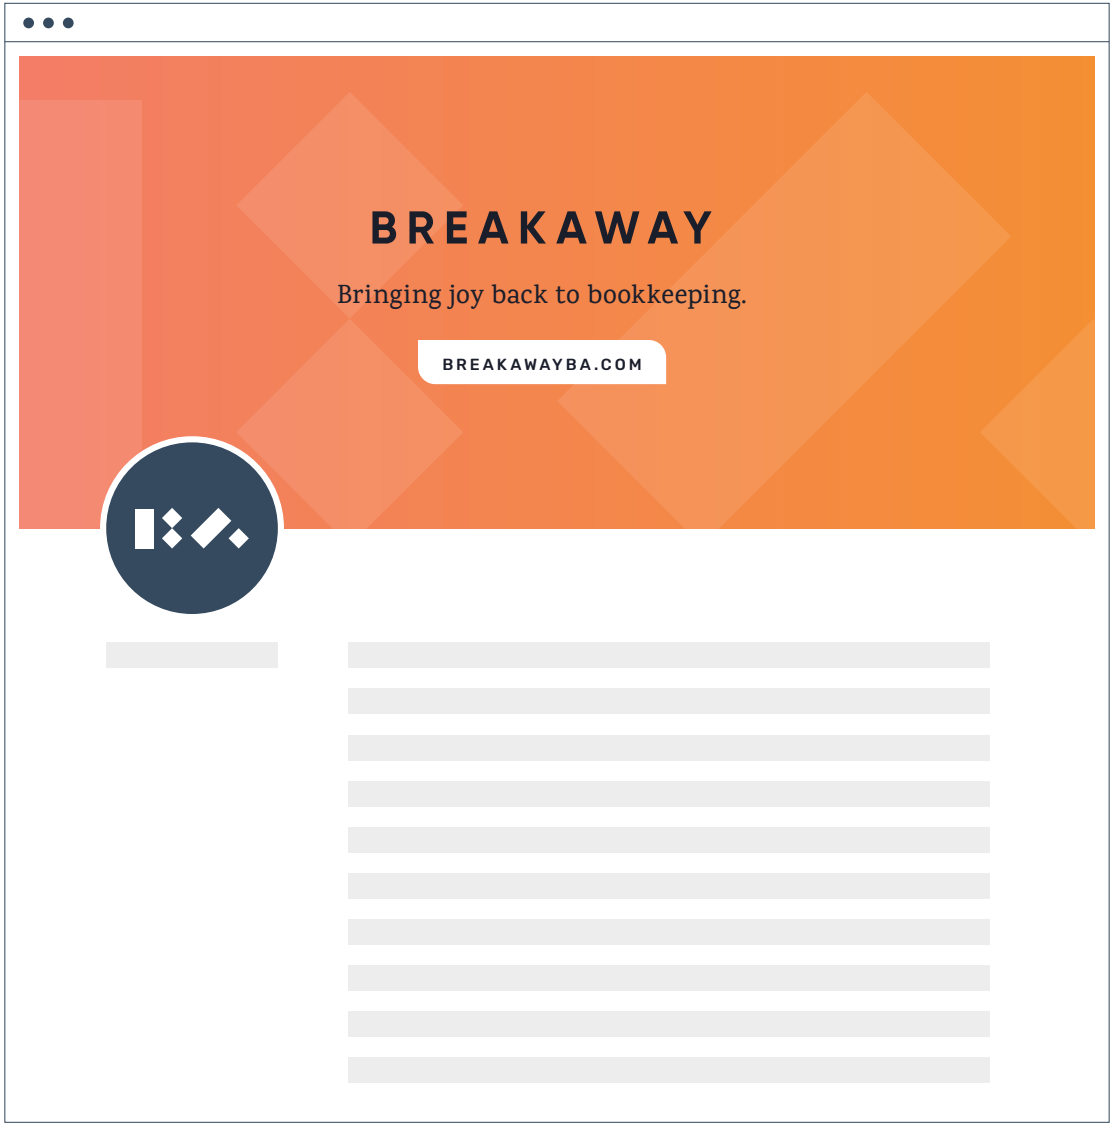
Social media banner + avatar images

I'd recommend updating all social media banner + profile/avatar images to the same designs to reinforce brand recognition. I've provided an example of a branded Facebook cover option to show how your elements work together.



I loved creating these custom icons (psst, they are 100% unique, just like your brand).

Use these throughout both print and web related items to maintain brand consistency and show your audience that details matter.

Fun places to use these are on stickers, social media graphics, notecards, your website, and more.

Provided in multi-color, as well as in a single color option using the following colors:
